Hans Morgenthau's Politics Among Nations is a classic of political science, built on the firm foundation of Morgenthau's watertight reasoning skills. The central aim of reasoning is to construct a logical and persuasive argument that carefully organizes and supports its conclusions - often around a central concept or scheme of argumentation.

If Kenneth Waltz is the Diego Maradona of Realism, then Hans Morgenthau is its Pele. But classifying Morgenthau as a pure classical Realist is to misread his greatest work, Politics Among Nations. His starting point is how human nature leads to the pursuit for power and how anarchy allows for conflicts among nations. Going into great lengths to ...

No nation will agree to concede political advantages to another nation without the expectation, which may or may not be well founded, of receiving proportionate advantages in return. Proportionate reduction of armaments is similar to territorial compensation, for both techniques require a quantitative evaluation of the influence that the arrangements are likely to exert on the respective power ...
